The 6th Crystal Palace Overground Festival returns to Crystal Palace in June (13-16) to showcase the best local live music, poetry, theatre, comedy, film, food and fashion with the main festival hub and opening on Saturday, 16 June at 11am.

Festival highlights include performing arts, crafts, sports and kids' activities, gourmet food and drink stalls and the best local bands on the Antenna music stage in Westow Park.

Around the Crystal Palace Triangle, local bars will host stalls, gigs and DJs, and there will be shopping and music in the local markets, Church Road and Haynes Lane, with an art market in Victory Place.

The Crystal Palace Overground Festival promises something for everyone, and what's more, it's absolutely free!

Noreen Meehan, festival director, said: "The festival continues to go from strength to strength and provides a much-needed boost to the diverse independent businesses, and the fantastic creative people, musicians and artists of the area. We are very excited about a new performing arts space in the park this year and look forward to welcoming visitors to our lovely part of south-east London in June."

Last year, the festival attracted 4000 people to Crystal Palace but Noreen and her team of volunteers are anticipating an increase in number for the 2012 event.
