20:30 | Coopers Yard

The Electric Palace open air cinema

A rare showing of The Pleasure Garden (1953), a BBC short film, on its 60th anniversary. Filmed among the ruins of the Crystal Palace terraces, The Pleasure Garden is a poetic ode to desire. Made by the American poet James Broughton, the film features Hattie Jacques and Lindsay Anderson, with John le Mesurier as the bureaucrat determined to stamp out any form of free expression. Lovers of the history of Crystal Palace will find much to treasure in this time capsule of a film, which shows the Crystal Colonnade and the bandstand (both later demolished), the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve Memorial, and much of the statuary that was to be auctioned off in 1957.

Followed by a special screening of the Oscar nominated, BAFTA winning short, A Morning Stroll by Crystal Palace’s own, Grant Orchard.

This special event will be followed by the main feature Little Miss Sunshine. With bar and music – tickets £7.50 from the festival website (includes free drink on arrival).

Sponsors:

Crystal Palace-based Kinopto are a tech-startup developing a new service for the global film-screening market. They have created a digital delivery and playback system to bring high-quality cinema to any public venue, with films available just weeks after cinema release.

PERFORMING ARTS TENT

Sponsored by

THE TRANSMITTER

Step inside and enter a Victorian wonderland of curiosities and oddities with theatrical, inventive and mind-boggling interpretations of The Great Exhibition and beyond! Let your hair down, loosen your corset and twiddle that moustache whilst poets, bands and theatre-makers take to the main stage.

Or perhaps take an afternoon perambulation around our Cabinet of Curiosities to meet inspiring minds and take part in workshops that inform and amaze. With a mixture of local talent and theatrical beaux from further afield the LAStheatre team and festival producers create an event which celebrates the inquiring mind of the Victorian and the golden age of the Crystal Palace!

LAStheatre creates interactive and immersive theatre, transforming spaces through play, adventure and imagination
